Irish Newspaper Archives

Welcome to Irish Newspaper Archives the World's oldest and largest online Irish newspaper archive. Through the Irish Newspaper Archive's gateway individuals and libraries gain access to Ireland's great historical past. The archive hosts a vast collection of national, regional and out of print publications spanning 280 years of Irish history.

The archives offer a national newspaper database to research with legacy newspapers presented as they were originally printed in black and white and in full-page format. The archive also offers a current news section with 34 regional and daily newspapers that are uploaded to the site daily.

The archive consists of over 9 million pages of newspaper content from titles North and South of the Irish border. Genealogists and historians can search, retrieve and view births, deaths and marriage records from over 83 Irish publications. ## Archive – Technology

The archive software suite that provides the infrastructure for the resource has introduced many new features and enhancements, including a complete redesign of the solution's GUI (Graphical User Interface), rewritten application code based on HTML5, and search engine enhancements.

The APA's 'professional grade' search engine interface has been simplified to make it easier for non-expert users to intuitively perform routine searches, without losing any of the search engine's robust options, syntax, and wildcard capabilities. Researchers can use the following search forms; Simple search, Phrase search and Expression search. The search engine's 'Stemming' setting automatically determines for all derivatives of a word based on a common root word.

Access to the archives is via IP authentication and is Shibboleth compliant. Institutional members have access to an online administration area that provides usage statistics through a counter compliant analytic reporting tool.

Special Collection - Radical Newspapers Archive

The latest edition to the Irish Newspaper resource is our Radical Newspaper Archive. The Radical Newspaper Archive is a special collection of 115 radical and political newspapers, journals, pamphlets and bulletins. The collection of early 20th century publications allow for the very first-time historians to research online the political, social and industrial unrest of the Irish nation through one of our country's most revolutionary periods.

The Radical Newspaper Collection hosts publications from both North and South with titles such as The Belfast Labour News, Belfast Strike Bulletin, Dublin Strike News and the Irish Workers Republic. The archive also offers Irish American publications such as the Republican Congress and many bilingual titles; An Gaedial and Saoirse Eireann.
